

Food Fellows: Engaging Students in Meaningful Community-University Experiences

Purpose

Food Fellows trains and educates students about food-related social issues, such as food insecurity, food policy, and urban agriculture, through research and service with community agencies. Our aim is to develop informed students and create future leaders who will implement change in their communities, especially related to the issue of food.

Impact

Expose students to long-term service or research opportunities with community agencies to develop necessary skills for future careers related to the area of food.

Engage the campus and community in discussions about food-related social issues through a variety of awareness initiatives, including the SNAP Challenge.

Educate students about food related issues through various monthly gatherings, campus-based activities, and discussion with community partners.

Ohio State Colleges/Units Involved

College of Social Work
College of Education and
Human Ecology
College of Arts and Sciences

Community Partners Involved

Mid-Ohio Foodbank
Franklinton Gardens
Children's Hunger Alliance

Contact

Meera Nagarajan
Undergraduate Student
College of Education and
Human Ecology
College of Social Work
nagarajan.26@osu.edu

THE OHIO STATE
UNIVERSITY

